

OTC - online team collaboration tool

© 2017 Ilia Butvinnik, Michael Goldman
All Rights Reserved

1 Implementation details assumptions

1. When user clicks on other user username in thread, we create private channel immediately, without showing any additional forms. This is because in original paper it states in "Channel creation" section, paragraph 1, that user should be able to create public channel, and also in section "Channel discussion participation", paragraph 6.a states, that upon click on username private discussion should start, we understood it as immediate starting conversation. We also think that it is much better "Web Usability" to start immediate discussion and not go through any form fill for channel creation. However, we will add short constant description to private channels.
2. There is nothing found by us in original paper, that states which name of private channel should be upon creation. We assume that it is reasonable to give name in following form: "username1 & username2". This is because if multiple users started private conversations to one user, so he can distinguish these channels by name, because then they unique.